FACTIONS

by Mark Halpin

Solvers must determine the location of answers to sixteen "Factions" clues, which consist of wordplay only. Half read across, and are all part of the same faction; the rest read down, and make up a second faction. When these groups meet, they inevitably clash: in squares where faction members intersect, two different letters will be entered.

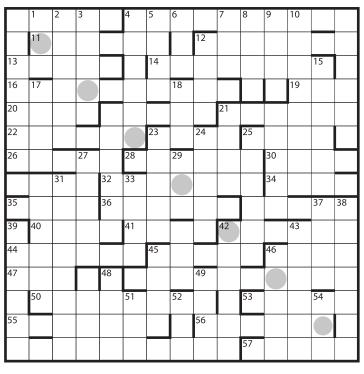

Reading the letters in these squares from the top of the grid down (the order of the letters within each pair to be determined by the solver) will reveal the location of one confrontation between the factions. Letters in the shaded squares will indicate when this may occur.
