

Let's Get Away From The City

Buon Giorno!

Florence of 1350 was perhaps not the ideal spot for a carefree summer getaway, what with the crowds, the pollution, and, oh yes, the Black Death ravaging Europe. In The Decameron, Giovanni Boccaccio recounts the tale of ten Florentine youths (the young men Panfilo, Filostrato, and Dioneo, and the young women Pampinea, Fiammetta, Filomena, Emilia, Lauretta, Neifile, and Elissa) who flee the pestilential city and sequester themselves in a rural villa.

A hundred stories, bawdy, satirical, romantic and tragic, are told to pass the time, each of the ten youths telling one story on each of ten days. Boccaccio's description of the order of the tales is incorrect, however, and should be disregarded. He also, curiously enough, omits the fact that each of the youths additionally provided a puzzle inspired by one of their favorite yarns.

In considering the youths' period of idle story-telling and puzzle-solving, one might discover the secret to a relaxing vacation. What is it?

A few things worth mentioning:

- 1) Confirm individual puzzle answers by clicking the question mark in the middle of the title page. Send me your final answer to the question above at mhalpin at fuse dot net.
- 2) There's nothing in this intro that relates to the puzzles beyond that which does so explicitly.
- 3) Familiarity with the literary inspiration for these puzzles is not necessary for solving.
- 4) All puzzles may be printed out to solve.
- 5) If you enjoy the puzzles, you might consider tossing something into the tip jar. I would love to get away from the city myself, particularly when the MIT Mystery Hunt and NPL Convention roll around, and every little bit helps.
- 6) A prize in the form of a book gift certificate will be given to the first individual or pair solvers, and speedy individual and team solvers will be recognized on the Leaderboard. In order to encourage more leisurely solving as well, an additional prize will be awarded to an individual chosen at random from anyone who submits a correct solution before Monday, Sept. 19, at which point hints and solutions to the puzzles will be posted. I'll be happy to provide hints at any point to anyone who doesn't care about the Leaderboard or prizes. The whole point of this endeavor is that it be fun, so if there's any way I can assist in that, please don't hesitate to ask.

Happy Solving!

DIONE0'S PUZZLE

Dioneo's puzzle was inspired by the tale of Messer Ricciardo's wife, who is stolen by the pirate Paganino, and when Ricciardo searcheth her out and demandeth her of him he can not rightly answer the questions she poseth, and so she loveth him not and becometh the wife of Paganino.
