

THE CITY OF BRASS

You gape in unalloyed awe at the ruins along the road: remnants of a great town, buildings and fountains, even clockwork people and animals, all forged from brass. But something vital is missing. Whoever created these amazing automatons has carelessly allowed them to run down, and scavengers have made off with half of the valuable material.

